In the center of the table was the birthday cake lighted with the 12 candles. Francis was generously remembered with gifts. Those in the party were Caroline Downing, Clara Adkins, Mary Hill, Lila Emerson, Arlene Saleeby and Alice Lafrance, Paul Brown, Dolor Lafrance, Laurance Smith, Sam Favor, Bernard Hutchins and the host.

OLIN B. UPTON

The above is a likeness of Olin B. Upton of Upton Ridge, Norway taken recently by his son, Carl.

Mr. Upton was born in the house where he now lives, on December 11, 1852, the son of Uriah H. and Isannah C. (Noble) and has always lived there except for ten years spent in Auburn. During those ten years his brother, Gilbert Upton, lived on the home place and from there went to California. The Upton homestead is one of the oldest in town and has been in the Upton family for many years.

Mr. Upton, who is in his 74th year, is one of Norway's highly respected citizens and one of it's prosperous formers. In years past he has been a grower of quantities of sweet corn and did an extensive business in general farming and especially in raising stock. Some eight or nine years ago he industriously set out two good sized apple orchards and is now doing more along the lines of orcharding.

Each spring finds him busy in his sap orchard, some years making around fifty gallons of syrup, depending much upon the season and the demand for the product.

Mr. Upton has not been a holder of public office but is a Republican and thoroughly interested in the doings of the day. If an available moment comes to him, you will find him as you see him in the above picture, with his newspaper or a book, eagerly reading, for he is a great reader.

Mr. Upton married Emma M. Swift of Greenwood and they have eight children, all of whom are living: Carl F. of Norway, Ross L. of Norway, Roy G., who has always lived at home; Eva M., who married Walter A. Lord of North Waterford; Ethel F., wife of Virgil A. Dunn of Norway; Minnie L., wife of Arthur A. Herrick of Norway; Percy O. married Ora Merrill Gately and Wayland S., who married Adelaide French of Norway. There are also five grandchildren.

Clean-Up-Week

Enter Into the Spirit of Cleaning Up and Make the Week a Success and Our Village Shine

Norway will have a special clean-up-week, commencing May 3 and continuing until May 8. Rubbish about buildings should be removed and the whole premises made tidy and wholesome.

About two years ago clean-up-week was a success and village property looked attractive. Exert the same energy this year and notice the effect. Visitors are keen to observe conditions and are not slow to advertise. Clean up for good looks and good health.

STRING BEANS, NOT MAYFLOWERS

We received a package at the post-office and announced that it undoubtedly contained Mayflowers. Imagine our surprise when it was found to contain string beans instead. There were 4 or five vines bearing string beans. They were raised by Mrs. Alice Cooper of Mechanic Falls and must have been house raised or else the climate in that prosperous burg is much warmer than it has been here for the past three months.

We hang them in the window as evidence of our not lying about them.

NEW NATIONAL BANK BUILDING

NORWAY NATIONAL BANK TO BUILD TWO AND A HALF STORY BRICK BUILDING ONTHE NOYES LOT TO COST BETWEEN $50,000 AND $60,000—OLD NOYES LAND MARK BEING REMOVED.

The new building of the Norway National Bank is assured and the work of tearing down about one-half of the Noyes block and clearing a portion of the lot will commence at once. The bakery building owned by Wilson Walker will be moved to Danforth street.

Plans call for a two-story block of tapestry brick and cement construction, running forty feet on Main street and sixty three feet on Cottage street. The building will be located close to the street line.

The bank will occupy the first floor and have an up-to-date equipment. On the right of the main street entrance will be a public telephone booth and on the left a ladies' rest room. The main banking room beyond will contain on the right a space for the cashier and a row of four wickets. A consultation room and four booths will be located on the opposite side with a room for the directors in the rear. A modern vault of fire and burglar proof construction is to be built into the structure near the rear wall. This vault will be divided for safety deposit boxes and for general banking use.

A Main street entrance on the northerly corner will lead to the second floor to be occupied by Dr. C. W. Nelson and the Norway Central of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. According to the plans Dr. Nelson will use four office rooms, to include consultation and operating rooms, all on the Main street side. The telephone exchange will use space in the rear and facing Cottage street to include the operator's room, stock room and retiring room.

The basement will have a concrete boiler room and coal pocket. There will be a large space for general work and several lavatories.

It is estimated the building and equipment will cost about $50,000. James H. Kerr of Rumford will have the general construction. L. M. Longley & Son, Norway will install the plumbing and heating, Howard B. Young, Norway, will do the wiring for electricity. Harry S. Coombs of Lewiston is the architect.

Work of demolishing the Noyes block will start next Monday and on the first of October the contractor expects to have completed the building.

As construction progresses it is possible the bank officials may decide to clear the entire lot and remove from sight the landmark that has harbored many kinds of business for 122 years.

MELLIE-GRAMS

Anxiously Looking East—Mellie Writes Usual Letter

We arrived here—Grand Rapids, Mich., Thursday morning, April 22. Three days stop and then off for Pittsburg, Pa.

We were met at depot by a multitude and brass band with furious music and made a triumphal tour of the city. All the acts and actors on the bill at Toledo came with us in the sleeping car to this city and were in the procession with your humble servant in the front. The car top tipped back and I waved my hand like a conquering hero, king, horse thief or a grey headed old fool. That is right, it is the truth, but its not hard to do. The people seemed pleased and the management wanted me to be seen and by-the-way they will pay me next Saturday night. That is why I do it. Nothing else.

They have given me a wonderful hand at the theatre. Last night there were hundreds of people who could not get in and in the last act "we stopped the show." It's true and that way pretty often.

After Pittsburg we'll begin going east and be at Syracuse, N. Y., May 3d, Lowell, Mass., and then Portland, Me. and home, that is unless changes are made. Regards to everybody.

Mellie and Gram.

Congregational Crurch Services

Dr. Olin H. Tracy preached a fine sermon at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, text, John 18:38, What is Truth? When the Poet of the Galilean hills stood before that astute man, Pilate, he was asked this question. Pilate was in a cynical mood when he made his inquiry. Truth is the reality behind the appearance of things—in your life and mine. We live in such close relations to the imperious demands of our physical lives that we forget the great universe which hovers over us. No sun or star is ever even a part of a second behind its running time. There is a Personality and Will close to it all which directs this law and order. Behind all the races and classes of men is the idea of brotherhood. The only thing we can do here in America to guarantee peace and prosperity is to be friends and neighbors with all men.

Why Not Let Maine People Decide?

Much Profit Going to Waste Because of "Fernald Law"—Give People Chance to Decide Whether to Repeal It or Not.

(From Portland Press Herald)

Why should there be objection to allowing the people of Maine to decide whether or not the so-called "Fernald Law" should be repealed or amended?

This law, which went into effect sixteen years ago, prohibits the exportation of hydro-electric power beyond the borders of the state. It was passed by the Legislature because it was thought that if we held on to our hydro-electric power industries seeking power would eventually be compelled to come to Maine.

The law has failed to bring this about. In 16 years there has not been a single industry which has come into Maine wholly on account of the hydro-electric power which could be secured here and could not be obtained elsewhere. It is true that during this long period there has been some hydro-electric development in Maine, but it has only been such as our own market could absorb and for sixteen years water power which might have been put to some useful purpose, and which might have brought investments upon which taxes could be levied, has been running to waste.

In other words, Maine has been standing still while other states, having less available water power have been making steady progress. A notable example, to name only one state, is North Carolina, which has been making remarkable industrial gains, due in a large measure, to its wise encouragement of water power development.

This being the situation, and the so-called "Fernald law" having failed to bring about what many people thought it would accomplish, why should there be objection to putting this question before the people to determine whether or not this policy should be continued?

One reason given for objecting to submitting this question to the people is that certain great interests much prefer to have the Maine water power remain undeveloped until they have carried out their plan of fully developing water power which they control in nearby States.

These interests have in view monopolizing whatever market there is for hydro-electric power in the manufacturing sections of New England outside of Maine. If Maine should enter the field with surplus power to sell these interests would have sharp competition in their field of operation. So it suits their purposes to have Maine retain the "Fernald law"; hold back on water power development and so insure their having the whole market to themselves.

Conflicting with the great interests which have been referred to is another powerful group which is engaged in hydro-electric development. This group recognizes the fact that the complete development of the water power in Maine would give a large amount of power, enough for the needs of this state for many years and a surplus which could be disposed of in the New England market. If the surplus power developed in this State could be sold in this market, it would aid in carrying the overhead on large investments and still have left an enormous amount of power which would be immediately available for industrial expansion in Maine.

This is the "nigger in the wood pile" and the real reason why the great interests which have no power holdings in Maine hope to delay hydro-electrical development here. Delaying a change in the "Fernald law" will give them time to monopolize the New England market without danger of competition. When this market has been safely secured then they will not care whether the Maine water power is developed or not.

But, in the meantime, our water power will continue to run to waste; Maine will lose the investment of great amounts of capital which would otherwise be made here and be subject to taxation; our industrial expansion will be postponed for another period of years and the state will continue to mark time while other states nearby are making progress.

Why should we play into the hands of those who have no wish to see this state make progress?

Why not insist that this important question be fully discussed and when all the facts have been placed before the people, have the "Fernald law" voted upon by those who are vitally concerned?

Are those who now oppose the reconsideratin of the "Fernald law" afraid to let the people of this state decide this question? If objections offered to the repeal or amendment of this law are well founded will not the people be easily convinced that they are right and decide the question as they want it decided?

KEZAR FALLS

Clean Up Day at M. E. Class Room—Mrs. Doe Home—Goddess of Spring Come Again.

Five ladies of the M. E. Circle had a cleaning up day in the little class room last week, making a wonderful transformation; first of all they attended to that cleanliness which is next to Godliness, hung muslin curtains at the window, replaced the pictures, burnished the stove, tacked some carpeting on the floor, viewed the result of their labor with critical eyes, concurred in the ultimatum "it looks real homey" and departed to their several domiciles well pleased with the work of their hands.

April 22nd, Mrs. Fred Whiton and Mrs. Perley Cross entertained the Ladies' Circle in the vestry. Seventeen were present and a very pleasant afternoon passed. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and punch were served.

Mrs. Bertha Doe has returned home, much benefited by her sojourn at St. Barnabas Hospital.

Rev. A. A. Callaghan is in Rockland, attending conference, and Mrs. Callaghan is with her sister in Brunswick. Both Mr. and Mrs. Callaghan are much appreciated by their people and others privileged to meet them and it will gratify the expressed wish of their many friends that they may return to Kezar Falls.

Preston Fox is reported as being in poor health.

Owen Palmer, who has been ill with the flu for nearly a month, begins to feel like himself again.

Old man winter seems to have evaporated. The river, free once more, sings exultantly, its deep basso blending with the robins' song. Tulips, hyacinths and other garden friends are looking up, carpets of green are being rolled over the lawns; every day shows a deeper tinge of color in the woodlands; by all these signs and others of like import, we know that She, the beautiful Goddess of Spring has come again into her own.

The Transportation of Calves

Last Fall certain persons who had been kept awake night after night by the bleating of hungry, homesick calves in stock cars, complained to the Pine Tree Humane Society, and in consequence one of our Agents was sent to inspect the cattle train which leaves Portland for Brighton every Monday night. From his report, which was communicated to the General Manager of the Maine Central, we quote only a single paragraph as follows: "In one overcrowded car there were two cows down, and one of them was lying upon some calves. The Yard-Master and I squeezed into the car, and with great difficulty lifted the cow off the calves, but could not get the cows up, they were crowded so close. There were 78 head in this car—fifteen cows, two steers, one hog, sixty calves." By a mere coincidence, one of our Directors happened to be at the Brighton Stock Yards when that same train arrived the next morning, and saw eight dead calves taken out of that same car. The Maine Central Railroad Company has made a sincere effort to correct these abuses, and with good effect, but the good effect has not, we regret to say, extended to every shipper.

A conference was held recently in Portland between the Railroad people, the cattle dealers, and the Pine Tree Humane Society, which was presided over by W. G. Hunton, Industrial Agent of the Maine Central, an expert in all matters relating to cattle, and a very humane man. From what transpired at this meeting, and has been learned since, it seems clear that one cause, probably the main cause, of the death of so many calves en route is that they are mortally sick when placed on board. But why, it will be asked, should any man want to send a poor little calf, diseased and perhaps dying, on that long, rough journey to Brighton? The answer is that the calf's hide will be worth one dollar if the creature reaches Boston, dead or alive.

In other cases, small, weak calves are killed by cows stepping or falling upon them. Many of these calves, it must be remembered, are shipped when they are only a day or two old.

In order to prevent these small calves from being trampled to death, Mr. Hunton has made the very reasonable suggestion that they should be placed in a pen by themselves, the bigger, stronger calves being put with the milch cows in order to suckle them, and so prevent milk fever. If this were done, the small calves would be protected from all injury, although they might suffer from hunger. Of course the only right way would be to refrain from shipping to Brighton any calf less than, say, two weeks old. Under the best possible conditions that trip involves suffering from hunger, rough handling, fright, fatigue, extreme cold in winter, extreme heat in summer, and it lasts, as a rule, from Sunday afternoon to the following Tuesday noon or night. What an ordeal for a newly-born creature!

To keep these young calves on the farm a week or two longer, with proper care, would cost nothing in money, for their increased value would make up for the increased expense. It would perhaps be inconvenient. Do the farmers who sell these day-old or week-old calves, and the dealer who buys them, care anything about their prospective suffering? Some of them say frankly that they do not. The money consideration is the only thing which appeals to them. On the other hand, some cattle dealers are really humane. Few of them, we trust, are deliberately and consciously cruel; but most of them have drifted into cruel practices. How else can we describe the conduct of a man who dumps a sick, perhaps dying calf, into a crowded freight car, and sends him off on a long journey, rather than lose the chance of getting one more dollar! We appeal to the people of Maine, and especially to the women, to prevent these horrible practices by turning upon them the light of public opinion.

Restoration of Old Ironsides

Old Historic Treasure to be Veritable Naval Museum

The patriotism and generosity of business men has been stirred to give to "Old Ironsides" some of the materials necessary for her restoration Already Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, Commandant of the First Naval District and National Chairman of the Save "Old Ironsides" Fund committee, has received assurance of contributions of materials that are the equivalent of about $50,000 in cash, and he has hopes that much of the material for the rebuilding of the ship will be donated by patriotic business associations.

The West Coast Lumbermen's Association have given the masts and bowsprit of the ship from the great redwood forests of the west coast. The Soutrern Pine Association of the south are looking over the plans and specifications sent them to see what their stock of pine can contribute; the Hardwood Manufacturers' Association are planning to do their part. From Pensacola mud is being taken out live oak frigate knees and beams put in water storage 80 years ago.

One of the great paint manufacturers of the country is offering paint. A copper producing company is considering how to replace some of the copper first made by Paul Revere's foundry for "Old Ironsides." A contribution of cordage and one of sail cloth for the mighty wings of "Old Ironsides" are in prospect.

Such contributions are very welcome to the Save "Old Ironsides" Fund as the material alone to go into the reconstruction of the ship will amount to over $200,000 if bought in the open market. The following will be used in reconditioning: Copper sheathing, cordage, tar, oakum, sail cloth, furniture, dishes, beeswax, twine, flags, signal flags, boats, and old relics of the day of sailing ships. Wood working tools are also needed.

It is the hope of Rear Admiral Andrews to make "Old Ironsides" a veritable naval museum when this old historic treasure is once again fitted for sea duty. The Navy Department is scouring every corner of the nation to secure relics of the early days of the American Navy. These will all be placed aboard the U. S. S. Constitution and the names of the donors and the history of the relics will be incorporated in the records of the ship. In fact every contribution, whether in cash or in kind, will be preserved in the records which will be placed aboard the ship, so that when "Old Ironsides" makes her voyage along the sea coasts and to the lake and river ports Young America will have an opportunity to inspect a great naval museum, as well as to walk the hallowed decks of America's most famous fighting ship.

FARM FIRE FIGHTING

Next in importance to buildings on a farm, is their protection from fire. The old-time farmer was repeatedly victimized by fire, for he did not foresee its occurence, much less guard against it. Alert and keeping pace with the times—by use of the telephone, radio, and regular reading of newspapers and magazines—the present-day farmer is informed of the simple precautions necessary and the most efficient apparatus available, for the prevention and combating of fire.

The fire protection equipment on the farm should be selected on the basis of its reliability, capacity and ease of operation. Naturally, it should always be kept in places where most liable to be needed; and farm hands, of both sexes, ought to be instructed in its use. Intelligence and preparedness on the part of the farmer can reduce farm fire loss.

For the middle-aged or elderly person who requires one pair of glasses for reading and another pair for out-of-door use, we recomment our Invisible Bifocal or double vision glasses.

They are really two pairs of glasses in one—two lenses fused together without any visible joining. There is no prominent seam or joint to tell the public that the wearer is "getting along in years."

With our Invisible Bifocals even your closest friends cannot detect that you are wearing double vision glasses. Call and see them.

Fliverettes

Notice how balmy it was a few days last week? That was the Fliver Ed. making "Spring" signs in Gorham.

Gorham would-be schoolmarms don't look much like the kind who taught us the three R's in the little red schoolhouse. However, we have faith that they will settle down. Even the socks of some of 'em have settled down—around their ankles—and we didn't get this information secondhand either.

You can call me small pertatoes,
But I won't be mad, by Heck,
When them precious little tubers
Are a dollar-ten a peck.

Whispers From Whip-o-will Ave.

Clarence Haley made the trip by auto from No. 8, Lovell, to P. O. Fryeburg, in 2 days and nine minutes flat (see note). Young Mr. Haley was obliged to hire a four horse team to haul his car part of the way, but even with this kindly consideration the poor thing died of exhaustion when it reached his dooryard, and the remains were turned over to Fred Watson, who will perform a post mortem examination at the auto graveyard. Mr. Haley is now in the market for a fliver and says: no more large cars for him. (Note): Flat, in this instance, means flat tires and flat pocket book.

Phil Matt is in our midst. If anyone tries to tread on Matt, we hope they get their Phil.

Smith Street Smiles

Noah McDonald, Friday Haley and the Fliver Editor have just finished putting new roofing on the Red Men's building. They used extra long nails, as the Haymaker's, when in session, are sometimes inclined to "raise the roof".

Chisholm B. Watt is working in Joe's garage. Chisholm has gained fame locally and in North Conway and we feel safe in saying that Joe's garage will enjoy a popularity which even Cram's magnificent motor mart could not exceed.

True to our prediction—Fryeburg Flivers on sale at the Fryeburg Fruit Co. has perked business up to such an extent that Messrs. Solari and Ratti have been enabled to open another store at ay, N. H. This is the second link of a chain of stores that may in time rival the "Red-Fronts" or other famous organizations, and Mr. Solari is probably congratulating himself on his foresight in tying up with that universal favorite, The Fryeburg Fliver.

Those worthy cits who have been complaining bitterly over the deplorable condition of some of our main throughfares, had the solemn? satisfaction of seeing one of the town fathers stuck hopelessly in the mud in his shiny new six, in the very heart of our residence section. About half of the town turned out to help pry the selectman's car out of the mud and to offer suggestions, which although terse and directly to the point, were not exactly complimentary to the road commissioners or town officials in general. This selectman sees now, that a little scraping would have kept him out of this scrape, and it is safe to assume that a certain section of our town streets will be made passable as soon as possible.

Thre's a cry that makes me glad,
Just "Dad"
It's the nicest cognomen I ever had,
I've been called by many a name,
Good or bad are all the same,
For they seem so sorta' tame,
Side o' "Dad."

When a kiddie far off calls:
"Oo-hoo, Dad!"
There's a thrill steals through my bones and makes me glad,
For a favor they'd entreat me,
Running breathless out to meet me,
Or a hundred ways they greet me,
It's: "Dad."

I tell you, folks, I'm proud of "Dad",
Word that's music from the lips of lass or lad,
And when the world has claimed
This brood that "Dad" has named,
Pray the Lord they'll ne'er be 'shamed
Of: "Dad."

Thousand Dollar Letter

A Fragrant Example of an Old Man Telling a Young Person What Things They Ought to Do.

It is a 16 page pamphlet issued by the Mitchell Letter Service of Alton, N. H., and is written and published as a feeble attempt to offset the pernicious effect, in some slight degree, of the tons of matter circulated under the caption: "The Magic Story", "The Inner Secret", "The Magic Key", "Psychology of Money-making", etc.

The author says: "You will undoubtedly find much in it to criticize, possibly the paragraph regarding newspapers, which I have marked. Several publishers have taken offense at this. But the man who has been a careful reader of the press during a period of years must have arrived at the conclusion, if honest with himself. The wisdom of putting in cold type a declaration of this sort was not, from a personal standpoint, given consideration. The thing stands "as it."

"It has long been my conviction that the education given in our public schools and colleges is not sufficiently practical. The average graduate (?) is not properly equipped to go out into the world and perform; he is not even in a mental state that will permit him to be readily shown what to do; his instruction has created a feeling of antagonistic superiority, and while he is quite useless and helpless he does not feel the need of sound advice and is affronted if it is tendered him."

"How to Gain a $1,000 or More" is a sensible pamphlet and should be read by every young person who has an ambition to do something. It points the way and tells it as it is regardless of what it ought to be. It is worth reading as it plainly states facts.

Have Confidence

Lack of Confidence Retards Growth

Have confidence in your own community and the people who compose it. This is the advice of the editor of one of the country's greatest magazines. Lack of this confidence is one of the principal factors which retards the growth of a municipality, according to this writer. He calls attention to the fact that few lines of business would be successful if their owners did not have confidence in them. It is the same with a community, the people must believe in it, believe that its best days lie ahead of it and not live on the "glorious achievements" of the past. Belief in your town and its institutions is what is needed. Stop the voice of harsh criticism and try instead to inspire a community spirit among your fellow townsmen, and bosot everything in your town that is good. Instead of pulling down, build up. If you see something about your neighbor, or his business, which you think might be improved, tell him so, in an inoffensive way, and it may result in a great benefit to him and thereby benefit the entire community. It is easy to stand on the outside and pick flaws with the manner in which some concern is conducted, or the manner in which one merchant or another conducts his store. If you see these things which should tend to improve his business, give better service to his customers or make stronger his position in the mercantile life of your community, tell him. Telling everyone else does not help, it hurts.

Continually finding fault with what you believe are the shortcomings of your town does not remedy them. It only creates a feeling of distrust and lack of confidence among others. Instead, try to remedy the conditions which exist by going to the proper people, telling them wherein you think a mistake is being made, what others are saying in the way of criticism, and see if the shortcomings in your town cannot be remedied to bring it more nearly ideal.

Do not point out the mistakes you think your town is making to strangers. They do not get a better idea of you or your town by so doing. Instead, believe that prosperity in increased measure lies right ahead and try to bring it about. When you believe that your community, while perhaps not the largest, is the best on earth, that there are no finer people in the world than those who compose it and when you are willing to back up every good movement that is started in your town you will be setting an example for your fellow citizens which is bound to bear good fruit. No town, no business, no man is building successfully when confidence is lacking.—Bath Times.

Youth is the only thing worth having, and that is about all youth has.

There is well grounded rumor that Main street is to be widened. That is, the curbing is to be set nearer the buildings, making less sidewalk and consequently more roadway. This would allow room for parking autos. It is needed too.

SPRAGUE'S JOURNAL

The April, May, June quarterly of Sprague's Journal of Maine history contains one of the most important Maine History items, that has appeared in print for many years. It is a complete history of the famous survey for a feasible route for a highway from Fort Pownal to Canada, made in the spring of 1764, by Joseph Chadwick, sent out by Governor Bernard. Its story has been buried in the records of old plans, maps, outlines of surveys, etc., by Charlevoix and other Jesuit writers of the eighteenth century. The Journal has been exceedingly fortunate in securing the services of Fannie Hardy Eckstorm, in producing this. It will be of unusual interest to readers, students and teachers in the counties of Piscataquis, Penobscot and other portons of Northern and Eastern Maine, and all Historians as well.

Shaw House Burned

Fire, Monday morning destroyed the home of Rev. J. B. Shaw, situated at the New Hampshire line about one mile from this village. The fire was discovered by a neighbor at about 3:30 a. m. and was beyond control before aid could be summoned from the village. A horse, cow and large flock of poultry were burned, as were the greater part of the household effects. Mr. Shaw had been a resident of this vicinity but a short time, having been burned out at his previous home about eighteen months ago, when he lost everything. He is a man of fine qualities, who has gained the friendship and respect of the community in his short stay here and he has the heartfelt sympathy of the entire neighborhood, and undoubtedly will receive their generous support in establishing a new home for his wife and three little ones.

BOWLING

Norway 1428; Oxford 1355

After a number of weeks without matches to thrill the sideline, one was staged at Parrin's alleys Monday evening, bringing together Oxford and Norway.

The local bowlers proved the strongest combination for the evening and led in three strings with considerable margin at the finish.

Breton was high scorer for Oxford with 112 for singles and 294 in the three string total. Smith landed second in the game total, but it remained for the Dummy to edge him out of second place in the single mark.

Burgess of Norway was high striker for the crowd. He made 122 for the highest single and 322 for game. Boynton followed in a close race making second place with 116 for a single and 310 total. "Pete Kelley" started good but had his bumps in the second string yet recovered during the final for third place in the team.

Championship Decided Here

It is expected that Mechanic Falls and Oxford may stage a championship match in Norway soon. Rumor has it that the Falls team challenged Oxford for a meeting in Lewiston, but by mutual consent Parrin's alleys will be the favored battle ground. This gathering may lead to other games as roads settle and outsiders can reach town without getting mired.

An Ancient Patent Right

Sheep-Rack Contriance Owned by North Waterford Man

It comes by the way of Eugene Andrews and E. S. Russell of Norway, to our attention. The certificate was from the press of George W. Millett, book, card and job printer of Norway, Maine, and the work done prior to March 11, 1865. On the back is written "George Burnham bot of John A. Green, Freeman's Patent Sheep-Rack to accommodate fifty sheep. Received pay, John A. Green, So. Waterford, March 11, 1865."

The printing is ornate in the extreme. It tells how to build the racks. J. Byron Freeman of Lebanon, N. H., owns the patent of June 16, 1863. John A. Green of North Waterforl is proprietor for its sale in the State of Maine of its rights, individual, town and county.

It fails to state how much George Burnham paid for his right or how much territory was conveyed to him.

PANAMA IS GOOD—SO IS MAINE

Dr. Harry P. Jones is home and much improved in health from a three weeks' trip to Panama. He journeyed in a party of four persons, including Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Couture of Providence, R. I., formerly of Bath and Calvin C. Hill of Boston. He planned to visit South America, but owing to delays in sailing, the trip was curtailed to a visit in Jamaica, Havana and in the city of Panama. They crossed the Isthmus to Colon by rail and inspected portions of the canal, beside numerous motor trips to points of interest including the ruins of ancient Panama.

Temperature in the southern clime registered 98 and almost unbearable in the sun. Keeping in the shade of the hotel piazza and facing the trade winds was quite agreeable.

Dr. Jones is delighted with life on shipboard. There were various games on the deck, Poland Spring water on tap and agreeable companions. Plenty of time for sleep and complete relaxation—the climate appeared to induce these conditions.

Maine was not forgotten during the excitement and he made many acquaintances who promised to visit Norway the coming summer. He boosted the state at every opportunity, for all were familiar with the name Mellie Dunham and anxious to know something more about the fiddler and this commonwealth.

The party covered a distance of about 5,000 miles.

The Farm Bureau will hold a Better Sire meeting at the farm of W. H. Walker on Pike Hill, Norway, Thursday, May 6 at 2 o'clock to which all interested are invited.

S. F. Elliott of Brunswick and late of Portland is the new barber at A. L. Cook's shop. It is "Shorty's" custom to emplcy more help during the season when autos, fishing and hunting are most attractive.

John Matherson, engineer on the Berlin switcher the past winter has been with his family here the past few days.

Bob Whitman was away from the shoe shop a number of days last week while suffering with the grippe.

The 6th and 7th grades played a game of baseball Tuesday afternoon at the fair grounds, the 6th grade winning with a score of 6 to 12.

Mrs. Eliot A. Fuller has been visiting her father, John C. Minot and sister, Miss Randall.

The Chatterbox club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Archie Parrin. The ladies spent a social evening with their needlework and embroidery, and the hostess served light refreshments. Those present besides the hostess were Mrs. Lucy Richardson, Mrs. Lena Raymond, Mrs. Dora Haggett, Miss Helen Richardson, Miss Alice Lewis and Mrs. Hannah Yates. Next week Wednesday evening, the club will meet with Mrs. Dora Haggett.

Raymond C. Judkins, 13, son of Harry C. Judkins, brought a fully bloomed Mayflower to our office Monday, the 26th. This is the first of the season. The flower was bloomed indoors, we are told.

Clean Up and Paint Up

Little Points Which Will Make the Home Town a Better Place to Live In.

A good citizen is a man whom you like to have as your neighbor.

He does not throw tin cans, brush, papers, or rubbish in alleys or on vacant lots, but places waste material in boxes or baskets, or places provided for rubbish.

He does not scatter lawn cuttings in the streets or alleys.

He does not burn leaves against curbings or on paved streets, knowing that this ruins cement and asphalt and means added costs for repairs—to himself and to you.

Good citizens co-operate at home, instead of in police court. Which do you do?

A good citizen knows that uncleanliness and carelessness are the obsequious footmen of disease.

He does not leave his garbage pail uncovered to breed flies. The less he leaves rotting, the less he is swatting.

He does not allow stagnant water to stand about his place and breed typhoid, nor invite alley-rats to be his guests.

A good citizen knows that over sixty-five per cent. of all fires start in the homes—that over eighty per cent of those burned to death yearly are women and children. The next time it may be his wife or his child.

He does not use the roof of garage or outhouse as a junk yard, nor pile his basement and attic with rubbish. These things are prolific causes of fire.

He does not leave oily rags about his home or garage, knowing that they cause spontaneous combustion. He breaks a match before throwing it away, for you cannot break a burning match.

He does not throw away lighted matches or cigarettes in the Mountain Parks, nor leave a campfire burning. Others will want to enjoy these parks again—so will he.

The good housewife does not keep oil floor mops in a corner, or closet, but places them in metal containers.

She does not clean with gasoline, but uses non-inflammable cleaners, of which many are on the market.

A good citizen thinks of public property and public premises, as well as his private property—for he is part owner of the street, the alleys and the parks. He knows that he must help pay for all damages.

He uses street receptacles for waste paper, and throws rubbish and papers in the containers placed for that purpose in the parks.

He does not commit vandalism, nor permit others to deface and scratch public buildings and statues, break or destroy benches—because it is his property, and he must pay the bill.

A good citizen is constructive. He knows that every sweep of the paint brush spreads sanitation, beauty and content.

He knows that a well kept place attracts, but a neglected place detracts. That paint and varnish are the natural guardians of property.

A good citizen digs the dandelions from his lawn. One pest-ridden lawn will ruin a neighborhood.

He plants flowers in his garden, and cultivates roses in the cheeks of his children.

He plants a tree—and takes care of it after it has been planted; he makes a home out of a house, by planting shrubs and vines and flowers about it.

THE FINAL ACT

Yankee Dunham came to town;
Riding in an auto.
That he earned by sheer good pluck,
Pluck should be his Motto.
Other Yankees tried to do—
Stunts upon the Fiddle;
But Yankee Dunham stood his ground,
To some it was a riddle.
Notwithstanding men were found,
Who were skilled in playing—
Old time tunes that stirred the blood,
And set the body swaying.
But Yankee Dunham seems to be
The people's choice on Fiddle;
We'll leave it here someone may find
A way to solve the riddle.

—JENNIE LIND ALLEN.

I HAVE FOUGHT A GOOD FIGHT, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.—II Timothy 4:7.

W. A. Hersey Lost One Finger—Began Work on Roads, Monday.

Norman Knightly, who is at work in the mill at Slide Inn, spent the week end with Leland Wilson and Frank Warren at North Lovell.

A. E. Cressey and son, Arthur, were home from Arthur Hall's mill over Sunday.

F. R. McAllister, our road commissioner, was in this part of the town, Saturday to ascertain when it would be possible to begin repairing the roads.

W. A. Hersey lost only one finger in his accident at the mill last week, but sawed and mangled the others quite badly. He seems to be getting on nicely at present.

Leonard Doughty and Mr. McKay spent Sunday night at Zeno Fontaine's on their way back to their work at Hall's mill.

John D. Grover took a nice veal calf to Lovell Center, recently to meet Chas. Saunders of Sweden, who will dress and ship the calf to Boston.

Leland Wilson spent the week end at his home at North Lovell, returning to Slide Inn, Sunday night.

F. R. McAllister, Merton McAllister and Charles Chaplin began work on the roads here, Monday.

Leon Cressey was unable to attend school Monday because of an ear ache.

RUMPUS IN THE SCHOOL

As an aftermath to an editorial called "The Morale of the School—Is It Breaking Down?" published in the school paper of the White Plains High school, N. Y., five members of the faculty will be dropped at the close of this scholastic year, among these being Winfield Kimball, physics instructor. Taking the affair all together there seems to be a general row on among the faculty and a school strike threatened.

Thousands of Lives are Sacrificed

Neglect of ordinary colds and coughs costs thousands of lives every year. A simple cold may be the forerunner of influenza, pneumonia or tuberculosis, with all the grave dangers that accompany these diseases.

Every cold is an infection, caused by germs. Destroy the germs and the cold is readily banished.

The direct method of attacking colds and coughs is to get rid of the cause by using an effective germicide which can reach the centers of infection.

"We will listen and take heed if you will tell us how to make profit, that's our creed." It is the creed of the business world. The highways are no place for the poor goafooter. Everybody atraveling by autos, just one blur streak, don't know where or what for they go. Hearn tell that travel was a great thing, great educator. Travel broadens on so they say. Bill Bump said he knew it did broaden some, used to own a Ford and his dear wife, Ophelia, took to riding and soon began to broaden and she broadened so fast he couldn't get her into the Henry Ford car. Now he owns one of those $5,000 big cars and she takes up the whole hind seat and is still broadening. She sits and rides just as though she was ariding on the clouds. A cone of ice cream in both hands and alooking for gift shops ahead.

People tearing down their houses and selling the lumber as second-hand. Nobody abuilding with new lumber, it costs so high. And taxes so high people have got to tear down their homes and sell the lumber to get the money to pay the taxes on what they haven't got.

All we got out of the late war was prohibition, cooties, millionaires, and auto road hogs!

As we grow older we are not anxious to rush out and along to meet new acquaintances and talk things over. Kinder rather look at the clouds and the mountains and the sunlight and shadow on the earth and the waters. Tranquil things. Not the crowd.

The rocks will tell you more than any human being can tell you. The waters, the earth, and the sky tell the same story.

To have the love of God and His masterpieces in your heart, your spirit, your very being. And I used the word love in the above lines. I have been careful of using that word for I have heard it used so free and often it becomes a meaningless expression. You will hear it used thus: "I love it, I love that pie, I love that hat, I love cats."

It is good to see the things that crawl on the ground, bugs, etc. I used to know them by their first and last names. Names educated men gave them. The bugs just kept right on being bugs on the earth. I don't care for the names men gave them, neither do the bugs. Weeds are good to look upon. The whole outfit belongs to the Grand Show. When you devote your time with just bugs, then you have bugs on the brain. Better take in the whole show and not limit yourself to just bugs.

A prie fighter don't go into the ring loaded with umbrellas and bundles. He dresses just enough to cover the law as do some of the stage beauties.

When science arrives to its last and true station, it will be art. The art of the beautiful. Science of beauty.

Those flowers of the upper reaches and some people pick them and take them to the lower levels. You should never disturb those sacred things for they were not created to be handled only to be admired where they belong. You might as well try to bring home the song of the hermit thrush, or pick an echo.

Treat a friend as you would a flower or a crystal. Friends are not made to handle. Never ask a friend to turn a grindstone for you. And if you have a load of trouble, don't carry it to your friend, he, she, or it, don't want it.

Never experiment in the trying out of a friend. Pretty delicate blossom this friend business is. Then for God's sake, and your sake, and your friend's sake, never attempt to advise them. And don't poke your finger in their eye, either eye. Don't mind these don'ts.

I had ocean tales told me when I was a boy, by sailors and ship masters and fishermen. I had a boat, a real sail boat and we voyaged along the coast among the islands. Pirate's treasures were hunted and not found. The great mystery of the ocean we all owned and enjoyed.

The boat was not there. I swam the Androscoggin with a Franklin stove on my shoulders, a bushel of potatoes under my arm and a bean hole in my knapsack. That is what I did before the days of ferry boats.

Daisey's Phoenix Camps, Sourdnahunk Lakes

North, Back and Above Mt. Katahdin Wilderness

The following was written some years ago and was squelched, side-tracked, or lost. It recently turned up and was thought fit to print with this explanation, that it describes the old conditions, but not the present day camps. You'd enjoy a trip there. Make it.

Here I am at Sourdnahunk, 58.4 miles from Greenville Junction, plus 5 miles by buckboard and water, hence 63.4 miles from Henry Bartley's where the rumble of freight trains disturbs weary lodgers. Mr. Daisey's guide book says about 60 miles from Greenville, 57 by auto and 3 by buckboard and nothing is told of the two mile paddle up the thoroughfare and Lake.

There are nine wooden shacks here, called "cabins" and going with them on the bluff in the rear and overlooking the lake are six watch towers, three painted green and the others unpainted. From the lake they resemble small observatories hence the name "watch towers." They are useful.

The main camp is embellished with a rustic sign: "Camp Phoenix." A portion of the letters from long usage and high winds have dropped out, but you can make out its ancient meaning. Here is the office, dining room and kitchen. Surmounting the ridgepole is a bell tower, which, when the bell is rung, creeks and groans, but it tells when to get up in the morning, also when meals are ready. The other morning, after a night of high wind and rain, a school-marm's bell was jingled in the yard to wake the sleepers.

I supposed the belfry had blown away, but later learned that only the bell-rope had broken.

The cabins are small, 12x14 inside measure, with two windows, two half beds, with plenty of nice clean bedding, a stove and two big rocking chairs; a light stand, wash stool, tin pail, dippers with innumerable number of hooks and nails on which to hang clothing. They are clean and cosy and are built of logs and huddled together. Maybe there is four acres of cleared land. Potatoes, hay, garden truck, green peas and weeds seem to thrive.

Laziness and shiftlessness prevail in every direction. In some spots more than in others. Food good and plenty, camps crowded to capacity.

Rates $5.00 per day or $28.00 per week, transportation and guides extra.

Best trout fishing and scenery in the state. No doubt about it. Come and be convinced.

HARRISON

One day recently Howard Whitney walked from his home in Harrison over to Oxford, he was three hours going over; he spent the night with his brother, Percy Whitney. He started from Oxford the next morning at six o'clock, walked to South Paris, called on Mr. and Mrs. Fordyce McAlister, made one stop in Norway and arrived home at half past twelve at noon, he rode only two miles.

Little Fred Whitney has had six trees tapped, gathered all the sap and has made two quarts of maple syrup; not bad for a four year old boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whitney have moved home from the village where they have lived all winter.

Were You at the Cooking School Yesterday?

If you were you are probably pretty well familiar with the wonderful advantages of cooking electrically.

If you were not there, can't you imagine the fun—yes, fun—of going out into the kitchen and merely turning a switch and presto! you're ready to cook. No matches, no coal or wood and no ashes.

Imagine further the convenience of being able to put your dinner in the oven at 8 o'clock in the morning, if you wish, and come back at 12 to find it cooked perfectly—ready to put on the table.

Cooking electrically takes all the guess out of cooking—and leaves all the meat juices and goodness that was meant to be there.

Actual Bills Prove Economy of Cooking Electrically.

With all the advantages that cooking electrically brings to the housewife, you would naturally think the cost would be greater.

Here are some actual bills taken at random from our many hundreds of range users. You will see that the cost of cooking electrically may be cheaper than your present method:

	Number in family	Average Monthly Cost Cooking Electrically
Mrs. A.	1 adult, 2 children	$3.12
Mrs. B.	2 adults, 2 children	3.68
Mrs. C.	3 adults, 2 children	5.58
Mrs. C.	2 adults	4.41

We will be pleased to show you these or any other bills for electric cooking. There are other accounts even lower, proving that electric cooking is really inexpensive.

Ask us how little it will cost per month for your size family.

GOD'S COVENANT WITH NOAH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 8:20; 9:27.
GOLDEN TEXT—I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.—Gen. 9:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Promise of the Rainbow.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Promise to Noah.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Story of Noah.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Dealing With Noah.

In order to grasp the meaning of God's covenant with Noah, the whole story of the flood should be clearly in the mind of the teacher and the pupil.

I. The Cause of the Flood (6:1-8).

It was apostasy from God. The two types of men we saw in Cain and Abel (the one of proud self-will, the other of humble faith), developed on diverging lines, but as they multiplied they came into contact and intermarried.

II. The Ark the Way of Salvation (6:14-7:24).

Although all flesh had corrupted its way before God, in His mercy provision was made for such as would avail themselves of it. Christ is the ark into which all who enter are eternally saved. As all outside of the ark perished, so all outside the redemption of Christ shall perish (Mark 16:16; II Thess. 1:8, 9; John 3:18, 19, 36; I Pet. 3:18-22).

Observe in connection with this judgment and provision of salvation:

1. The long-suffering God—He waited 120 years.

2. Noah, a preacher of righteousness (II Pet. 2:5).

God not only waited long, but through Noah sounded forth intelligent warnings.

3. God will not withhold His anger forever. At the appointed time the flood came and everything perished outside of the ark.

III. Beginning Life Upon a New World (Gen. 8:20).

This was a most solemn hour for Noah. With the fresh consciousness of God's hatred and judgment of sin, Noah faced the responsibility of giving shape to the life which was beginning upon the cleansed earth. He was to replenish the earth. Happily Noah began right, for he began with the act of worship.

IV. The Covenant With Noah (8:21; 9:27).

God was well pleased with Noah's act of devotion. Because of this He entered into a covenant with him embracing the following elements:

1. Assurance of the perpetuity of the race (8:21, cf. 9:8-17).

The bow was set in the cloud as a token or guarantee of this.

2. The security of the order of nature (8:22).

We know of the succession of the seasons and the ongoing of the system of nature only because of the guarantee of Him who controls them all.

3. Establishing the privileges and responsibilities of Noah and his descendants in their relation to the earth (9:1-4).

(1) The earth to be replenished (v. 1).

(2) Dominion restored. The dominion which was lost through the fall of man was now restored; but on the ground of fear.

(3) Animal food given.

Heretofore man subsisted on a vegetable diet (Gen. 1:29).

4. Human government established (9:4-6).

The sword of justice was placed in man's hands and man was to be ruled by man. This sword has never been removed (Rom. 13:1-7).

5. The destinies and interrelations of the three great branches of the race fixed (9:18-27).

(1) Cursed be Canaan (v. 25). The descendants of Ham were reduced to the lowest condition of servitude. This was partly fulfilled in the time of Joshua in their being partly exterminated and partly reduced to the lowest form of servitude, and also in the time of Solomon (Josh. 9:23; I Kings 9:20, 21), and it is still in the process of fulfillment in that for the most part Canaan's descendants are the world's servants.

(2) Blessed shall be Shem (v. 26).

This was fulfilled in making the Jewish race the repository of religious truth and ultimately in Christ the promised seed.

(3) Enlargement of Japheth (v. 27). This was fulfilled in making him the progenitor of peoples and multitudes (10:5); also in the civilization which has been brought to the world through him.

Christ and the Resurrection

Let the science of historical investigation be rigorously applied to the resurrection of Jesus. Christianity will not fear the proof. For it has pleased God that this crowning seal put to His Son's life should be sustained and guarded by an amount of proof such as no other fact in ancient history can boast; so that no honest searcher for truth might be left in doubt that Jesus of Nazareth has been declared to be the Son of God with power.—J. Oswald Dykes.

EARLY SLEIGHING—ROAD HEARING AT ELM HOUSE—THAWS AND WATER NEARLY FILL THE LAKE

Edited by Don C. Seitz

Dec. 3, 1854—Sunday, cloudy, has the appearance of snow. There is a little snow on the round making decent sleighing, pretty cold. The fall has been dry and mostly pleasant, but a bad season for timbermen and for all requiring machinery to be run by water.

Uncle Bennett remains very unwell, having been failing for six months. The appearance of imbecility or insanity thought to be visible about three weeks since has disappeared and now is as rational as ever. A stranger died this morning at E. G. Allen's, where he has been at work several weeks, by the name of Lovejoy.

Dec. 10—Sunday. Cloudy and has the appearance of a snow storm. A severe North East snow storm commenc'd last Sunday evening and continued until Monday at 9 A. M. 12 in. fell and blew into drifts with great violence and on Monday the roads out of the village and streets in the village had to be broken out. Much damage done near the ocean. Theodore Barker was expected to deliver a lecture on Monday morning last at the Universalist Church in the village, but failed on account of the storm. One week ago last Friday a serious accident occur'd on the A. & St. L. R. Road in the town of Stark, N. H., when the freight train run into the Passenger train coming up behind, demolishing and burning up the Passenger and Baggage Cars and injuring 10 or 12 passengers. None have died.

Webster has kill'd and salted down his hogs, both weighing 750 lbs.

Dec. 17—Very fine weather and good sleighing and has been good sleighing 2 weeks. Yesterday and day before was pleasant and quite a thaw. The water in the Pond a little on the rise—wanting 2 feet to run over the dam. Last Wednesday evening a lecture was delivered by Prof. Hitchcock of Brunswick, another is expected next week by a Frenchman from Boston on the French Revolution.

A hearing was had at the Elm House the past week for the discontinuance of the road through a part of Otisfield, Norway and Oxford from Harrison by a petition from the three towns, which petition was granted. The hearing was before the Cumberland Commissioners, Stover, Faine & Wells and the Commissioners from Oxford, Spring, Brown & Wilson; the result was a unanimous decision or is suppos'd to discontnue.

Dec. 24—Sunday and very cold and snowy; has been very cold the last week. Snow 1 1-2 feet on the ground and good sledding at Norway. Water in the Pond 2 feet below top of Dam, and a plenty of grinding.

Last Saturday week, the School District No. 7 had a meeting and accepted the new schoolhouse, which I have built this year for $900. A new tailor has come into the village lately by the name of Man, and located in the Kimball store chamber.

Dec. 31—Sunday. Clear and cold day. This ends 1854. Christmas weather commenc'd last Monday; warm and pleasant Tuesday; warm & pleasant Wednesday; cloudy & moderate, some rain & some snow Thursday; moderate thaw and inclining to rain Friday; a little rainy & a little snowy & and in all a moderate thawy day Saturday; cold, some cloudy & changeable Sunday as above which is the forerunner of July. Christmas weather indicates a moderate open winter.

The Legislature commenc'd session next Wednesdav at Augusta. Grinding at the mill abundant and water two feet below top of dam and has been so 5 or 6 weeks. Unable to saw at saw mill. Western yellow corn is worth $1.10 in Portland & $1.20 in Norway. Flour, middling $11; best $12.50. Hog worth in Portland $20, at Norway $14. Fine wood in Portland $8, at Norway $3.50 & $4.00.

Jan. 7, 1855—Sunday. Cloudy & some snowy—not very cold. Thursday & Friday was the last days of Christmas & was pleasant. Saturday was cold, very. In all Christmas denotes a moderate winter & a good season.

The Legislature assembled last Wednesday & organiz'd by the choice of Franklin Mussey for President of the Senate and Sidney Perham, Speaker of the House, H. K. Baker of Hallowell, Clerk of the House and L. O. Coneau of Saco, Secretary of the Senate. Republican strenth in the House 106, opposition 43—2 absent. Senate unanimous.

There has been much fine sleighing this winter so far, but the general impression is that we shall have but little more snow. Snow now on the ground 18 inches. Water low in the Pond, wanting 3 feet of top of the Dam. Mr. Wilkins has commenc'd sawing shingles.

Jan. 14—Sunday, pleasant and windy. Yesterday was thawy and a little rainy at night. until 9 o'clock in the evening. Water still low in the pond. Legislature gets along finely; the opposition is about 43 in the House & in the Senate unanimous for Morrill & Temperance. The Universalists here are making preparation to have a "Fair" to pay up the debts of the Society. It is yet good sleighing at Norway, rather poor in Portland. Money is scarce. The work on new Station is moving along very well; 40 hands at work.

BRIDGTON ACADEMY

Baseball Practice Held Back by Weather Man—Prize Speaking and Orono Field Meet—Chadbourn Athletic Field Being Worked Out to Rid the Place of Ice.

The track team, consisting of nineteen mon, were at Orono, where they competed against the University of Maine freshmen in a dual track meet Saturday afternoon. The Bridgton boys have been greatly handicapped as they have been unable to get out on the cinders as snow covered the track. However, they have put in three weeks' work since the opening of school. This is the opening of a hard, long season from hte black and gray fliers and before the season is closed another splendid record for the season is looked for.

A few nights ago coach Sampson discovered what looks to be a good find in the weights in Philip Wlibur, who has never been out for track work. He showed exceptionally fine promise, in fact with the first few throws, he tossed out the weights farther than any man that represented Bridgton before, so early in the season. With the hammer and javelin he gives great promise and although he has had little practice, he was taken to Orono to gain what knowledge he is able in these events.

Bridgton Academy was represented at the Lydia Spear (Hamlin) Prize Speaking Contest held in Portland, Friday, by Leigh Flint of North Bridgton. This is a state wide affair. The prizes consisting of $150 are given by Arthur G. Spear of Portland, state representative, and is being held to promote interest in public speaking throughout the state.

For many years the Academy has held the Edward Brown prize speaking contest, which allows twenty-five dollars to the winners each year. The winners are sent to the county speaking contest at Portland, also to the Lyford's at Colby College. Flint was the winner of the Brown prize this year, and at the Boston Alumni meeting he delivered the same piece, "The Man of Sorrows," which he rendered at Portland. Flint is a member of the Junior class.

Friday was the first day that anything like baseball weather conditions existed since the beginning of the spring term. A temporary diamond on the top of Chadbourne Hill has served the purpose for a time and the team is being whipped into condition for their opening encounter, April 28, in Bridgton, against the St. Anslem Prep School nine. Little is known of this New Hampshire institution, this being their first trip into the State of Maine.

NORWAY'S FAMOUS AUTHOR

Dr. C. A. Stephens is Topic of an Entertaining Newspaper Story

By Katharine Crosby in Boston Evening Transcript, January 9

Norway, in the State of Maine, still has several famous men within its borders. For instance, across the narrow water of Norway Lake from the home of Mellie Dunham is the home of another man whose fame is also nation-wide and has been, too, for half a century. There are, perhaps, few quiet people in all the world who have made so deep an impression and had so far-raching an influence.

For fifty-five years Dr. Charles Asbury Stephens has been writing stories for the Youth's Companion—fifty-five years this very month. During that time he has produced over 2,500 stories and "rising ninety serials," as he puts it. The readers who know his "C. A. Stephens" beneath a multitude of titles must number well into the millions.

The hills and fields of Norway were white with snow that day a week or so ago when I drove over from the town with the mail man to the Lake postoffice, whence I walked up the road to the house where the Stephenses live. It is a big house, and at the far corner of it, upstairs, is a big room. At the far corner of that room is a small table, near a sunny wndow, and behind the small table I saw a smallish man sitting and writing with a pen on white paper.

That day while I was there two letters came in the mail, which his wife said were fair samples of the two thousand which reached him in the course of a year. One was from a boy who wanted to know "how old you really are. From the way you write, I think you must be about as old as I am." He lived in St. Joseph, Mo. The other letter was postmarked Grand Rapids, Mich., and was from a man who wrote that he was just leaving for the hospital where he was to undergo what might prove a fatal operation, but before he went he wanted to tell Dr. Stephens what his stories had meant to him, what an influence they had had on his life, how grateful he was for them.

In the summer the big house is a mecca for his readers. They come from all over the country, some in big cars, some in flivvers, some on foot with packs on their backs, and they come to see him because they have read his stories and want to know what he is like, and if he really did live on the Old Farm, and if the Old Squire really was his grandfather. A boy from Walla-Walla walked there from Wood's Hole last summer; a group of young men made a pilgrimage from California; one day 150 children in autos drove into his yard and asked him if he would please tell them some stories. He finds it hard to get any work done in the summer.

He is far from looking the venerable man his half-century career would suggest. There isn't a streak of gray in his dark har, his spare body moves alertly and vigorously, there is a ruddy color in his cheeks. Only the grizzled moustache would indicate that he is within fifteen or twenty years of his age. Every morning he does a measured mile around the floor of the big music room, when it is too stormy to go out doors, and often helps to "work up the wood" for the dozen fireplaces. (It takes them and three furnaces, to keep even a part of the huge house comfortable through a Norway winter). His enthusiasms are as fresh as those of the boys for whom he writes.

Born in North Norway, up beyond the head of Norway Lake—which on the map is called Pennesseewassee—he went to the little district school number eleven, then had a couple of terms or so at academies. After that he entered Bowdoin College somehow as a sophomore, stayed out the next year to work, and returning, was graduated in the class of '69. He had done the work in two years and earned his expenses besides. While there he won prizes for elocution. Elija Kellogg was then in the height of his fame and used to write declamations for the boys. Young Stephens wanted one wrtten for him, but could not see any way of raising the $300 which Kellogg was receiving then. He was sellng sawing machines, teaching school and chopping wood. Once he obtained a chance to teach in the Middle West, but found on getting there that the job was filled. So he went to work chopping hickory. When I inquired if he made much money that way he laughed.

"Guess you never chopped any hickory, did you?" he asked.

Began by Writing Science Story

His first piece of writing at the mature age of nineteen, the year he graduated from college, was entitled "Among the Ruins of Ancient Science." Science was, indeed, his first love, and for years now what he calls his "Sunday work" has been devoted to it.

But it was in The Youths Companion that he found his field. It had been a child's paper until Daniel Sharp Ford bought it and began devoting all his energies to make it a clean and interesting journal for young people and the entire home circle. This family appeal, Dr. Stephens thinks, kept it from the failure which overtook most of the juvenile papers of the day. Instead of sharing the fate of Golden Days, Our Young Folks and Harper's Young People, it is celebrating this year its one hundredth anniversary. Boys used to grow up with it and presently find themselves continuing their subscriptions for their own sons. An admiral has told me that he read it until he went to Annapolis; a general that he gave it up reluctantly when he left for West Point.

Up the two long flights of narrow, dingy stirs which led to the editor's office at 153 Washington Street, climbed a bashful lad with a couple of stories in his pocket which he hoped he might sell for $10 apiece to the Companion. He was only a year or so out of college, and had modestly decided to live by his pen. Bidden after his second knock to "come in," he entered and found himself in a long room with one window at the farther end. At a table, beyond a tall coal stove in active operation, sat Mr. Ford, spare, neat and reserved, correcting proof. He told the budding author to leave his manuscripts and come back day after tomorrow for the verdict.

The verdict was an offer of $7 apiece for the stories, a sum which "was not wholly illiberal, fifty years ago," the author says, and one which he was perfectly willing to accept for his three-thousand-word tales. Next week he took in two more, and was paid $10 apiece for them. With this money he went to Washington to see how they were getting along with the new Washington Monument they were building, and to have a look at the sad state of Mt. Vernon. For his article, "Mt. Vernon Today," he received $15, which he proudly reflected was as much as Bunyan got for his entire "Pilgrim's Progress."

"Young writers," says the doctor, "derive much comfort from such reflections."

Travel for Youth's Companion

Mr. Ford did not like traveling, so he made Stephens his proxy for the paper. New York came next, with the editorial caution, "New York is a great city, but undoubtedly many bad people reside there." That summer Mr. Ford suggested a trip to Evangeline's Land and the Saguenay River, where literary tourists like Howells and Cable were beginning to go.

Vernon Today," he received $15, which he proudly reflected was as much as Bunyan got for his entire "Pilgrim's Progress."

"Young writers," says the doctor, "derive much comfort from such reflections."

Travel for Youth's Companion

Mr. Ford did not like traveling, so he made Stephens his proxy for the paper. New York came next, with the editorial caution, "New York is a great city, but undoubtedly many bad people reside there." That summer Mr. Ford suggested a trip to Evangeline's Land and the Saguenay River, where literary tourists like Howells and Cable were beginning to go.

"Think your money will hold out for it?" he asked anxiously.

"I'll go anyhow," the boy said, and he did.

This was the beginning of more than twenty years of travel and adventure and of constant writing. There were duties which kept him at home on the old farm in Norway part of the time, but as soon as he could, off he would go again—canoeing down the Allegash through the Main woods after stories of hunting and trapping; to Yellowstone Park, the Pacific Coast, British Columbia—all this with traveling conditions as they were forty or fifty years ago—to Alaska and Newfoundland, two steamboat trips down the Mississippi, three months around Lake Superior, three voyages to the Paris expositions, all the American world fairs, trips to Mexico, Panama, Cuba, Guatemala—and many others.

Most of his stories are of things that really happened, and they could well be, for plenty of things did happen. In 1885 he went to Isle Royale in Lake Superior with a young mining engineer to look at some old-time copper mines there, and had a lively set-to with a gang of smugglers who were making the deserted island their headquarters. Two or three years before he had had an encounter with pumas while he was climbing Popocatepetl; there was something doing, too, when he tried to take photographs of the grizzly bears at a caviar factory on the upper Columbia.

That same year while "Searching for Uncle Sam's Lost Camels" (as the resulting article was called) in the delta of the Colorado river, he made one of the earliest trips into the Grand Canyon. He went down by what is now known as the Bright Angel Trail and spent a night by the river with a wandering youth later known in journalism as Gisgo. They slept in a bit of coarse sand fairly comfortably, but woke up next morning to find a jaguar and her two whelps approaching. The boys managed to reach a shelf of rock and drove the animals off with stones. Scientists were much surprised later to hear of jaguas so far north.

After investigating the terrible privations of the Nebraska pioneers, he wrote a series of sketches called "Wintering in a Sod House," which he signed Wilhelmina Smith. As a result of this he received four proposals of marriage from Western farmers, each of which added much to the gaiety of the Companion office.

It was in 1879 that he went to Moosehead Lake with a "dour young man named Sam Clemens." Apparently Clemens and Mark Twain were a sort of Jekyll-and-Hyde, for Dr. Stephens remembers that he "seemed to be in the dumps and it was hard to extract a civil word from him.

On one of his steamboat trips down the Mississippi Dr. Stephens fell in with an enthusiastic young inventor from Nebraska who had constructed a model for a "cyclone-proof" house from which he expected to make a fortune. The scheme appealed to Stephens as a valid investment, and so he put all his Companion savings into it. Their idea was to take their model round to localities where there had recently been cyclones and get orders from those who had lost their homes.

Having heard that several counties of eastern Texas had just been ravaged, the two hopeful young partners went up the Red River to the Texas line and took their model ashore. The thing weighed about six hundred pounds and took a team of four mules with a darky driver to haul it. All went well until they reached the Sabine river, which was in flood. They got onto the bridge, but it collapsed beneath them and they all went into the torrent below.

The mules were drowned and the model was lost beyond the hope of recovery, so the glittering project had to be abandoned.

"There is today a perfectly good model for a cyclone-proof house," says the doctor, "reposing in the muddy bed of the Sabine river, somewhere below that bridge and less than thirty miles from Logansport."

How He Became "Doctor"

One day Mr. Ford made a new and quite different request. "Won't you study medicine?" he asked. It seemed they needed someone in the office who knew medicine and Stephens was elected. He went through the full course at Boston University School of Medicine and graduated with the class of '87.

Dr. Stephens has never practised medicine, but he had always been interested in Science, particularly in biology. His Sunday work, as he calls his researches, has resulted in half a dozen volumes, the first one written before he went to medical school. This was "Living Matter" written in 1882. Following that came "Pluricellular Man," "Long Life," "Natural Salvation," "Salvation by Science" and "Immortal Life," published in 1920.

At one time he hoped to gather about him a group of young scientists who would share his enthusiasm for this particular line of research work. John Coombs, a corporation lawyer of Boston, and Prof. Charles Otis Whitman of the University of Chicago, had allied themselves with him in furthering the project and a study of serums, anticipating some of the present theories, was under way. Their aim was to investigate methods of prolonging life, but a sardonic fate meted out early death to both Mr. Coombs and Prof. Whitman, and so the plan in its larger aspects had to be given up. Dr. Stephens has worked along by himself, in the spare time left him by his work for the Companion.

A Story a Week for Many Years

A story a week, year in and year out, is his minimum output. Of late he has been doing a series of stories about the Old Farm. In this, as in so many of his tales, real people figure, and under their real names—members of his own family. The farm is situated a couple of miles up the road from where the Stephenses now live, on top of a picturesque ridge that overlooks the lake and much of Oxford County with its heaped-up hills. It consists of between three and four hundred acres and has several old orchards, groves of sugar maple, two fine brooks and High Nubble Hill with its fox dens. Here the Old Squire's grandchildren, one of whom was Dr. Stephens himself, passed their youthful years and attended the district school, where they studied not only the three R's, but Latin as well, and the Constitution of the United States. When they grew older they drove six miles down to the Academy.

Famous people sometimes strayed that way. Vice President Hannibal Hamlin called one day and shared fried pies with the youngsters. One stormy night a book agent sought shelter there—and afterwards they were proud to have had Hudson Maxim as their guest. Another night a stranger came and they kept him till morning; they were never perfectly sure who he was, but they always believed him to be Thoreau.

Boyhood and Present Homes

The head of the house was the fine, lovable old Squire, who lived to be ninety-eight, and his active little wife, Grandmother Ruth, who only achieved ninety-seven years. After they had died and the children had gone out into the world there were tenant farmers for a while, and then the old house burned down. But the place still serves as an inspiration to the man who lived there as a boy and who remembers the life so vividly, and he often walks up there now and lives it all over again. Then he comes back home and writes it as freshly as if it had just happened.

His own house stands on a grassy slope looking out across the lake to the hills beyond—old Singepole and Streaked and Hill Number 4 and the rest; around it are the two thousand pines he has had set out, and down by the road is the well with the long sweep and the rose-quartz curb. The room where he works is large and sunny, with a huge clear window, giving the view of lake and hills and nearer pines.

Bear and lynx still rove those hills, so there is native material to be had for stories of adventure. Only last year a boy out rowing on a pond beyond the lake saw a bear swimming and gave chase to it. The animal let him get within twenty feet and then turned and gave chase to the boat, which he caught and upset. The lad didn't stop to argue about it, but let the bear have the boat and swam ashore.

His Literary Methods

Dr. Stephens has a theory that there is plenty of story-stuff in real life, plenty of adventure, plenty of romance, plenty of humor and tears and glory, without going out of one's way to invent it. On this theory he has been writing for fifty-odd years a story a week, and he still has plenty to write about. Whatever the merits of his method, he has certainly got into the hearts of the American people as few writers of the day have done.

It has been given him to build through the years, with cumulative power, an influence on boys which it is hard to measure. His stories are never "jazzed up" and modern mechanics play small part in them. They are not keyed up to movie speed. But their readers, being boys, know them for what they are, the Real Thing. They ring true, in their simplicity, their unpretentious directness. They are as different from most boys' stuffs as Mellie Dunham's music is from Paul Whiteman's. That one little town should have in it two men who appeal so strongly to the hearts of everyday people as do Dr. Stephens and Mellie Dunham shows that while it may not perhaps be New Yorky in its thinking, it is normally and sympathetically American in its feelings.

BUDDY'S POPPIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Disabled and needy veterans, war-maimed heroes of the Argonne and the Somme, of Verdun and Chateau Thiery, are making the thousands of Buddy Poppies for the 1926 poppy sale of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Buddy Poppy making begins early in anticipation of the nation-wide sale the end of May. Fingers stiffened by gun-shot wounds and eyes dimmed by war-gasses need plenty of time to make the scarlet blossoms which will gleam in the buttonholes of all America on Memorial Day. Throughout the spring the poppy makers are at work.

Among the most active workers are the patients in U. S. Veterans' Hospital No. 81, who under the direction of the Occupational Therapy Department of the Hospital are gallantly doing their bit to "carry on." Poppies are also made in other government hospitals and in specially equipped "poppy factory" workrooms.

Many of the poppy makers are men who cannot be rehabilitated by the Veterans' Bureau because their disability was not contemplated by the War Risk and Vocational Training laws when passed and who are designated by the government as "non-feasible." To these men in particular the poppy making offers a livelihood which the majority, because of their condition, would be helpless to earn in their former occupation. "Buddy Poppy" is the name the men themselves selected, and a copyright label guarantees each V. F. W. flower as a handiwork of disabled or needy ex-service men. The entire proceeds of the sale are used for relief work.

ADDITIONAL NOMINATIONS

A number of nomination papers for the June primaries were filed on the last day, April 19. Among them are:

UNITED PARISH

Oxford County United Parish of the Towns of Stoneham, the Waterfords and Albany—Social Activities and Church Work.

Interest in the larger parish work is not confined just to the open country. There are those in the city that are watching the experiments. Last Wednesday Mr. Bull spoke to an interested group of these friends, who had gathered at the Williston Church, Portland, at the monthly meeting of the Missionary Society. We hope through our cooperation with friends in some of the larger centers we may be enabled to accomplish still more through our organization as a United Parish.

The Circle at Stoneham and their friends celebrated again on Thursday evening. With the bountiful supper of beans and lemon pies, with a chance to talk with friends and neighbors, and with songs and games, a very jolly evening was passed by those present. And next time, men, save up your appetites, for next week, that is the sxth of May, the Stoneham ladies are going to serve a covered dish supper. It sounds kind of mysterious, but say. look out there, your mouth is watering already!!

Last Saturday mornng, Rev. J. F. Thurston, who so recently came from Massachusetts, where he had been receiving treatment at the New England Sanitorium, returned to the hospital He conducted the service at North Waterford but during the week it seemed evident that his strength was not sufficient for the demands of the work. As he returns once more seeking health and strength, the sympathy and thoughts of the whole Parish go with him.

Because of sickness the service at No. Waterford, on Sunday morning, was omitted. The service Sunday was to have been attended by the Oxford Lodge I. O. O. F., for their anniversary service. This service has been postponed until a later date when people have recovered from the prevailing distemper.

The service at Albany was likewise omitted on Sunday and Mr. Townsend conducted the service at the Flat, while Mr. Bull went to East Stoneham. After the service at the latter place, a business meeting was held. After the election of a delegate to the State Conference, to be held at Portland, next week, a building committee was appointed to work with the trustees to make needed repairs on the Church. The committee met on Tuesday evening and it was decided to start at once on the roof and to put on some new shingles at once. Other work will follow soon. We understand that the Church at the Flat is to be renovated this summer. At North Waterford we are hoping for some repairs—so it looks as though the United Parish Churches were going to look all dressed up very shortly.

During the last few weeks the thoughts of many in the United Parish have been with those who have been sick, and especially does the sympathy of all go out to the friends and relatives of Leander Billings, and to the family of Walker Nason.
